STILLWATER COTTON SCHOOL TO DRAW WELL

INDICATIONS NOW POINT TO RECORD YEAR FOR COTTON SCHOOL.

SCHOOL OPENS ON JULY 6

Efficient Instructors Have Been Obtained for all Departments; May Break Former Records

STILLWATER, July 4.—(Special)—Letters received here from growers, buyers and ginners of cotton in many counties in Oklahoma indicate that the attendance this year at the annual cotton school of Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical college will be the largest since the cotton school was organized five years ago. The school will open July 6 and continue to August 1. Persons interested in the school can enter at any time, but there is a great advantage in registering at the beginning of the course and remaining throughout the session. The work of the school is organized to cover a period of four weeks and in this period the entire subject of cotton, from the preparation of the soil to the marketing of the final product, will be covered. Wright in Charge. Arrangements for the cotton school are in charge of Prof. A. H. Wright of the department of agriculture. Mr. Wright has succeeded in getting together a strong staff, and most of the men who will have charge of the instruction in the cotton school have had previous experience with the school here. The important work of grading and marketing will be under the direction of E. C. Brady of Muskogee, Okla., who has successfully conducted this feature of the school in past years. He will be assisted by Frank S. Hall, a cotton buyer of Tecumseh, Okla., who has had experience on the cotton school staff.

Cotton Insects. The lectures on production will be given by Prof. O. O. Churchill and E. E. Hall of the department of agronomy of the college. Lectures on insects that affect cotton will be given by Prof. N. O. Booth of the department of horticulture and botany. Special lectures will be given by the following: C. E. Hoke, U. S. department of agriculture, Oklahoma City; C. C. Hultquist, cotton ginner, Coweta; Chester N. Nunn, county demonstration agent, Okemah; C. K. Francis, chemist, A. & M. college, Stillwater; E. E. Fowler, foreman of Foss, A. & M. college, Stillwater; T. J. Wortman, supervisor, Hoke's and Girl clubs, A. & M. college.

Complete Course. Cotton classes are taught from the standard grades and half grades of cotton as prepared by the United States department of commerce and distributed by the United States department of agriculture. A score card for special use in this school has been devised. This card makes the work of cotton grading much easier and the student is soon able to class cotton successfully without the card.

Thousands of samples of cotton, from the big cotton markets of the United States and the various cotton producing countries of Oklahoma, have been purchased for use in this school. These samples cover all of the recognized grades and half grades and are indispensable to the success of the work in cotton grading. The appeal of the cotton school is to the grower, buyer and ginner. About seventy men attended the cotton school last year and many of these men have written that they expect to be back this year and will bring others. The A. & M. college cotton school is said to be the only institution of its kind at any agricultural college. Other schools are considering the establishment of similar courses.

The Cost of Beer.

Did you know that three glasses of beer a day will cost $46.75 a year? The W. C. T. U. in Philadelphia is engaged in the work of showing how much can be bought for that sum each year in the way of groceries, and it is really surprising. You might make the calculation for yourself.

UNIQUE LAWS IN MONTENEGRO NOW

WOMEN IN MONTENEGRO DO THE REAL WORK WHILE MEN LOAF.

LIFE LIGHTLY REGARDED

King Nicholas In His 54 Years In Office Has Made a Wonderful Record.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—George Hugging Moses, former United States minister to Greece and Montenegro, in a communication to the National Geological Society at Washington, D. C., describes Montenegro as one of the oddest countries in the world. There, the women are producers; clothes make the man; the king is greater than the ministry; the chamber of the constitution, and a man may be imprisoned for eating hedgehog. A man who is struck may kill the striker, provided it be done at once; if he delays, he is punished as a murderer.

Wonderful Reign. The writer points King Nicholas in glowing colors. "In the 54 years of his reign, he has doubled his territory, added two Adriatic ports to his possessions and has organized ministries, the courts, finance, and all the departments," he says. Where, when he came to the throne, only a few difficult trails threaded the hills, today a splendid network of roads connects all the principal points of the kingdom, and it may be said of Montenegro alone among nations, that wherever one may go at all in a wheeled conveyance one may go in an automobile. Nicholas has established posts and telegraphs, so that whereas once a Montenegroan communication was effected by stentorian hawking from peak to peak, Cettigne is now constantly in touch with all parts of the country and with the outside world. He has modified the laws, a task always begun by his predecessor. He is a statesman, at once bold and cautious, a diplomatist of many talents, a capable administrator, and a thoughtful reformer. writes Mr. Moses. Again and again he has represented the warlike and proud his mountaineers and has led them to battle only when in other course was possible.

Pocketbook is Low. "As the creature so runs the Montenegro legend, an angel was sent forth to pick up the superfluous stones on the earth's surface. He placed them in a bag which hung as he was flying over Scutari, one of the loftiest of the Black Mountains, and certainly the landscape seems out of the tale. European dress has made slight inroads in this part of the world. A Montenegro's habit is as costly as his purse can buy, and there the angel plucketh the money. The larger these progress are the more the king or the peasant, as is the case, cannot wish which holds the inevitable paradox. But from the red jacket and the redolent use, one notes whether the wearer be a man of substance and consequence or not. Among the women there are slighter distinctions.

All Are "Bosses." "The women engage in the productive pursuits. And yet the men have capacity and some take from his belated environment of his mountain home becomes one of the best of workers. His 500 years of freedom have given the Montenegro a fine sense of order, and it is a curious saying along the Danube, and that which a Montenegro applying for a job is asked what he can do he invariably answers, "So-so, I intend." "I intend" for one is intended to be, and in the articles regulating public administration it is provided that the tractor men have the best indicated by his ticket, but it is added, "The defense due by such to men, yes, but that the farmer yield the best, for plough to their seeders." Another article declares the penalty of all before the law, and lays down the democratic principle of the universal ownership of land and the equal right of all to hold office.

Roads in Angos. "Practically the only motor cars in Montenegro are those in use by royalty, and as the machines pass along the splendid roads all the peasants working in the fields, even the most distant, straighten themselves and make a deep obeisance on the road passes and at every halting place the people swarm up in the hope that they have the privilege of kissing the road hand."
